

All Activities have a controller and a model. Activities have specific models and controllers tailored for them. All controllers has a dataAccessor which allows them to store data in the database. The ActivityModels typically has a list of objects which the Activities and Controllers uses.